WHAT DID SHE SAY?

Men Made It Up, But Without Reckoning with Her.

Just as a barber in a shop on Eleventh street, near Chestnut, had finished lathering the face of one of his best customers, says the Philadelphia Record, a well-known business man, there swept into the place a handsomely dressed, young and pretty woman, who, as she rushed up to the man with the soap-sudged face, said:

"Dearie, they told me at the store that you came here, and, as I have to hurry to catch the train, I had to run over here to say good-by."

She rattled this off in one gasp, and, stooping over, she landed a smacking kiss on the lathered man's mouth. Wiping the soapsuds off her lips with her dainty handkerchief, the woman bounced out, saying as she went: "Now, remember, you must write to me every day. Good-by."

The barber, in surprise, said: "Why, I didn't know you were married."

He was more surprised when the man who had been addressed as "Dearie" answered: "I ain't, and, what's more, I never saw that woman before."

The barber's laughter was interrupted by a man who was being shaved in the next chair, who said: "That was my wife."

Shaving operations were suspended all around until the second man could explain. The story was simple enough. The woman was going to Atlantic City for a short stay, and she was to bid her husband good-by at his place of business, which is near the barber shop. Arrived at the store, the woman found that hubby was at the barber's, and, time being precious, she hurried to the barber shop to say her adieu.

As the first man she came to in the place looked, as he lay lathered, as much like her husband as the husband did himself, the wife naturally mistook him for her lord and master.

"But why didn't you stop her in time?" asked the man who had been kissed.

"I couldn't," was the reply, "because my barber was working on a ticklish point on my chin, and if I had opened my mouth I would certainly have got cut. But, of course, I didn't imagine she was going to kiss you."

The kissed man, as if to console the husband, said: "But she thought it was you she was kissing."

The husband, with a "that's so," agreed. After both men had got out of their chairs the husband extended his hand to the man his wife kissed and, as the two shook, the husband said: "It's all right; let's have a drink."

And they went across the street and had several.

MILITARY FORCE OF JAPAN.

Equipped, Organized and Drilled Like European Armies.

The Japanese army is equipped, organized and drilled like a European army and many of its officers have received their education in European countries, says the Philadelphia Times. Conscription was introduced into Japan in 1874 and the regulations now in force were adopted in 1883. Every male citizen between the ages of 17 and 40 years owes military service, which is given three years in the active army, four years in the first reserve, five years in the territorial army and 11 years in the national army or the second reserve. For the year 1901-02 the budget provides for 13 divisions of 24 brigades of infantry, each brigade composed of two regiments of three battalions each.

The cavalry comprises 17 regiments or 51 squadrons. The artillery has 19 regiments or 114 field and mountain batteries. The engineers have at present 28 companies and will soon have 39. The army service corps has 13 battalions of two companies, with one battalion (three companies) of railway troops and one battalion (three companies) of telegraph troops. Besides the 13 divisions of infantry there are three regiments of coast guards and two battalions of foot artillery and a special brigade of four battalions of infantry, cavalry, artillery and engineers (the Yesso brigade). The aggregate is 8,116 officers and 135,533 men on a peace footing. The war strength is 392,220 men and 1,098 guns, the reserves excluded. When it is remembered that recent campaigns have shown the Japanese army to be of first-rate quality it is obvious that the military power of the new nation of the Pacific is formidable.
